

CROPSEY HITS HARDER NOW

NOT FIGHT IN KINGS OVER THE UNION BANK MATTER.

Republican candidate comes back with his reasons for serious charges against present district attorney.

The defunct Union Bank and its management hold the front of the political stage in the campaign in Brooklyn and the Republican managers are resolved to make from the chief issue, with ex-Police Commissioner James C. Cropsey, the candidate for District Attorney and special counsel at the bank investigation, as their spokesman.

At the notification ceremony at the Union League Club on Saturday Mr. Cropsey made a sharp attack on District Attorney John C. Clarke in regard to his handling of the Union Bank matter and especially for the delay in bringing it to the attention of the Grand Jury, and on the same day Mr. Clarke at the Democratic notification meeting defended his action in the bank matter and contended that it was his duty to wait until the investigation by the State Banking Department was started. Mr. Cropsey last night at a special meeting of the Republican county committee in the Johnson Building to notify the ticket, resumed his attack on the District Attorney and accused him of several misstatements in his speech accepting a nomination. In the course of his speech Mr. Cropsey said:

In his speech of acceptance last Saturday the Democratic candidate labored heavily in defense of his attitude in this matter. The Union Bank investigation. In fact, the burden of the defense was so great that he evidently felt that it could not be borne by stating the facts exactly as they exist. He seems to have realized that the facts in the matter would not constitute a defense for his speech contains several misstatements of important matters and omits to state a number of equally important facts.

It is reported to have said "I will take the opportunity of declaring that the evidence received from the Banking Department upon which an indictment could be preferred was this year, 1911," and again, referring to the period that the bank was closed the first time, that is, from January, 1908, to August, 1909, he said "Nothing involving the commission of a crime upon which an indictment could be found was during that seven months reported to the District Attorney's office from any bank examiner."

It is seen that the facts are. In the public investigation of the Union Bank, which has been going on for some months, much testimony was given, and it was there shown just what had been submitted to the District Attorney. It was shown, showing the commission of crime by officials of the bank, and a copy of the evidence that was given upon this investigation, is I understand, in the possession of the District Attorney, so that it will be easy for him to compare the statements made by Mr. Cropsey with the evidence. Mr. Cropsey, who was then one of the Deputy Superintendents of Banks of the State of New York, testified that in the early part of August, 1909, he personally delivered to the District Attorney's office of Kings county two letters written by the Superintendent of Banks and also a transcript of the evidence of certain witnesses who had been examined by the Superintendent of Banks relating to irregularities and criminalities connected with the Union Bank. The testimony shown by the District Attorney, so that it will be easy for him to compare the statements made by Mr. Cropsey with the evidence.

It was the evidence given before the Grand Jury in question that those conducting the investigation endeavored to get a number of weeks, but which evidence was said to be "lost." Then when the question of the "lost records" in the District Attorney's office was becoming a serious one, the testimony was suddenly "found." It is stated that no evidence showing the commission of a crime upon which an indictment could be found was submitted to his office at any time prior to 1911, let him say that the evidence was that was actually given before the Grand Jury that was reported in August, 1909.

I have not seen the evidence upon which Sullivan was indicted, but I do know that at least one witness whose testimony would show Mr. Sullivan's culpability in the matter was not called or sworn before the Grand Jury. Of course the District Attorney's office may have secured other evidence, of which I have no knowledge, showing Mr. Sullivan's connection with the crime.

The other candidates on the county ticket, including the Democrats and Charles H. Kelly, one of the candidates for the Supreme Court, sent in his resignation as chairman of the county committee.

WOMEN AGAINST CUVILLIER.

Anti-feminists will fight his candidacy for the Assembly.

The Women's Political Union has opened campaign headquarters at 33 East 12th street for the purpose of defeating James A. Cuvillier, Democratic candidate for the Assembly in the Thirtieth District.

Miss Elizabeth Cook, the Cornell orator, in charge of the headquarters, and has arranged for street and indoor meetings, house to house canvassing, and the distribution of anti-Cuvillier literature.

The Women's Political party had also issued a campaign against Cuvillier, but the burning of the Thirtieth District, the other organization Mrs. James (Mrs. Laidlaw), chairman of the Borough of Manhattan, said that the party would not have other districts and western Pennsylvania, twenty-eighth or thirty-first.

The women are not satisfied this year with several promises from candidates, but are requiring them to sign pledges that they will vote for the submission of the Suffrage amendment. Those who do not sign are listed as enemies to the cause.

A Store Always in Sight

MACK IT IS FOR CHAIRMAN.

He Got to Work at Once to Keep the Assembly Democratic.

There was a general conference of Democrats, up State and down State, at Delmonico's late yesterday afternoon at which the foremost topic was the choice of a chairman of the State committee to succeed Winfield A. Huppuch, who resigns because of his indictment by the Federal Grand Jury at Cleveland. Norman E. Mack of Buffalo was practically selected at the meeting of the State committee at the Knickerbocker Hotel at noon to-morrow.

Mr. Mack has been Democratic national committeeman for the State since 1904. He took the place vacated by William F. Sheehan, who resigned because of his opposition to the free silver plank that year. Mr. Mack was reelected national committeeman in 1900, 1904 and 1908 and in 1908 the national committee elected him chairman of the committee. Mr. Mack is the owner of several newspapers in Buffalo and is editor of the National Monthly, which is devoted almost entirely to Democratic national politics. He will be State chairman until the Democratic State convention in the spring, when delegates at large to the national convention are to be selected and a platform adopted setting forth the views of the Democracy of New York State.

Charles F. Murphy and his friends at yesterday's conference said they were convinced that Mr. Mack would make an excellent State chairman. They said that he was thoroughly familiar with the policies of the party and fully acquainted with up-State and down-State conditions, had through thick and thin been a regular Democrat committed to the national policies of the party and an earnest advocate of them, and as national chairman in 1908 developed good executive capacity, and besides had been tactful, avoided quarrels and possessed the confidence of the leaders in all the counties.

Immediately after his election Mr. Mack will take up the campaign to reelect a Democratic Assembly. His headquarters will be at Democratic State headquarters in the Waldorf-Astoria.

Miss Dutcher, Running for Alderman.

No official action, it was stated yesterday, will be taken by the Women's Trade Union League regarding the nomination of Miss Elizabeth Dutcher, a member of the league, by the Socialist party for Alderman in the Forty-second district.

The officers of the league said that while Miss Dutcher's many friends in the league would be ready and willing, if asked, to take the stump for her as individuals, the league as a body had no politics, and even if it had, its members, being women, had no vote.

The Weather.

Oct. 17.—A storm was capital yesterday morning over Iowa, causing rain in the upper lake regions and the Mississippi Valley and at scattered points from the Dakotas south into Texas. The rain to the south, however, was principally due to sharply cooler weather following the storm and covering the country between the Rocky Mountains and the Mississippi Valley.

In the south Atlantic and Gulf States east of Louisiana and northward in the Mississippi Valley to the upper lake regions it was warmer. The tendency was toward higher temperatures in the Northeastern States. Temperatures were below the freezing point in Wyoming and parts of Utah, Colorado and northern Arizona and New Mexico.

In this city the day was fair, slightly cooler in the morning; wind, light northeast; temperature, 61° to 65°; barometer, 30.02; humidity, 71 per cent; barometer, corrected to sea level, at 8 A. M., 30.02; 3 P. M., 30.03.

MONKEY FLED FROM GERMS

THIS IPHIGENIA REFUSED TO BE SACRIFICED.

Escaped From Hudding Doctors at Cornell Medical College and Retreated to Coal Bin, Where Her Throwing Arm Provided a Strong Defence.

A highly excited monkey sat chattering on the window sill of the second story of the Cornell Medical College at Twenty-eighth street and Second avenue yesterday while from the street below a large crowd yelled advice to young doctors despatched from every window of the college.

The monkey is a Rhesus monkey, held in high esteem by the Hindus (the dictionary says it has a "moderate" tail), and her name is Iphigenia. Four months ago she arrived at the hospital to be laid on scientific altars and yesterday Dr. Arthur Throw, in charge of the pathological laboratories, on the second floor, began his preparations before his class to inoculate in the spine of Iphigenia the germs of infantile paralysis. These preparations Miss Rhesus watched with apprehensive eye and commenced a turbulent chattering. Everything was ready and they opened the cage to let the monkey out. She streaked out past the clutched hands of medics onto the window sill.

Appeals were vain to beguile her. As she skipped along the ledge in front of the building young doctors clutched at her hanging on by their toes, but she dodged them all, and while an unscientific crowd applauded, got to the end of the ledge hanging over the iron spiked fence that marches around the works of the Manhattan Brass Company that occupy the block with the college.

For a moment Iphigenia hesitated, looking down at the fence four feet below her with its bristly menace. Then, calling aloud upon all her gods, she jumped cleverly missing the spike and landing on the fence behind them. There was a whisk of moderate tail and Iphigenia was off, and caught him full on his back. For a while roving doctors and volunteers who had been admitted into the yards saw nothing of Iphigenia. Then out of the blue on the back of Michael O'Brien, a coal handler, who was shovelling in front of a shed, dropped a chattering brown object. Michael got one good look at her and was on his back and left for parts unknown, vowing that he had always been a temperate man.

Bounced from the laborer, Iphigenia landed on the ground. Then, calling aloud upon all her gods, she jumped cleverly missing the spike and landing on the fence behind them. Rielle says he considers the incident closed.

LIBRARIES DEPRESS ROSEBERY

Chilly Speech at Opening of 400,000 Volume Concern in Glasgow.

Special Cable Dispatch to THE SUN.

GLASGOW, Oct. 16.—Lord Rosebery opened the new Mitchell Library here to-day. The library cost $500,000 and will accommodate 400,000 volumes.

In his address Lord Rosebery said the subject of libraries had been exhausted by the 220,000 platitudes uttered at the opening of the 2,200 libraries given by Andrew Carnegie. He said he was not disposed himself to give libraries his qualified benediction. These enormous collections filled him with a hideous depression.

An enormous collection like that of the Mitchell Library had a stupefying, paralyzing rather than an encouraging effect. Without the faculty for discriminations, Lord Rosebery said, it was futile to provide libraries.

FREE TOBACCO COMPETITION

and James C. McReynolds, Special Assistant United States Attorney-General in the tobacco case, when asked if he had seen the plan, replied:

"Oh, yes. It's an old story to me. And, speaking of course only for myself, I regard it as a plain subterfuge which deserves an expeditious commitment to the scrap heap."

Mr. McReynolds said that the Government would not file its answer to the American Tobacco Company's petition until he should have time to confer with Attorney-General Wickersham about it, which will not be before the latter part of the week.

A summary of the plan as filed was made public by the company on Saturday. In addition to explaining in great detail the financial aspect of the reorganization scheme and its effect the document filed in court declares that as a part of it, under the Supreme Court mandate, "all covenants not to engage in the tobacco business will be terminated, leaving all free to engage in any branch of the tobacco business."

"Thus," the petition goes on to say, "the business in tobacco and related products heretofore controlled by the American Tobacco Company or by companies in which it owns a controlling interest will not only be completely divorced from such control but will be distributed among fourteen separate and individual companies, none of which will have any control or influence in any other and none of which will have any preponderating influence in any branch of the business either as a manufacturing company, a selling company or a purchaser of any type of leaf tobacco."

"Finally no small group of men nor even the twenty-nine individual defendants in the aggregate will own the control of any of the principal, accessory or subsidiary companies defendant, and the control of the American Tobacco Company itself and of the new companies to be formed will be vested in a body of over 6,000 stockholders."

In one paragraph of the proposed plan there is detailed a plan of treatment for the outside holders of the 8 per cent, preferred stock of the present P. Lorillard Company. This outstanding interest amounts to $408,000, as against the $1,506,100 held by the American Tobacco Company. In the petition the statement is made that in view of the fact that the present stock is an 8 per cent, stock it is only fair to the holders of these outside shares that they have the option of taking either cash for their holdings or the 7 per cent, preferred stock of the new P. Lorillard Company. This new stock to be offered to them at the rate of $114.25 a share. It is proposed further that the new company provide for an additional issue of preferred stock sufficient to take up the old preferred shares of these outside holders. This would amount to $1,182,000 in addition to the $1,048,991 preferred to be paid to the American Tobacco Company.

It is also requested in the petition that the American Snuff Company and the George W. Helme Company be permitted to manufacture certain brands of snuff, the one for the other, for a period of one year from March 1, 1912. The petition asks that the time on which the reorganization should go into effect be extended to March 1, 1912.

The independent directors have already announced their intention of fighting the proposed plan if they can get permission from the court to appear.

MOB CROWNED OVER CHOLERA.

Burn Trench Hall of Segui, Italy, and Drag Patients From Hospital.

Special Cable Dispatch to THE SUN.

MILAN, Oct. 16.—The sanitary precautions against cholera in the town of Segui have inflamed some of the ignorant inhabitants and a mob of 300 marched to the town hall to-day shouting for the release of their relatives and friends who had been sent to hospitals. The only force in the town, consisting of five carabinieri, was roughly handled by the rioters and overcome. The town hall was then sacked and burned.

The mob then marched through the town shouting "Death to the doctors and nurses!" On reaching the lazaretto they removed the cholera patients and carried them on their shoulders to their homes. Two of the patients, carried shoulder high, were at the point of death from the disease.

Troops were requested and now occupy the town. Many arrests have been made and order has been reestablished.
